

— AN ISSUE ON GENDER / POWER / EVERYDAY LIFE

Misogyny

What we perceive & what we overlook. A critical exploration of gender, power, social norms and everyday life in Bangladesh.

GENDER

POWER

CULTURE

REPRESENTATION

EVERYDAY LIFE

THEORY Beauvoir, Connell, Foucault, Hall, Kandiyoti

CASE STUDY When women police women: the grandmother effect

VOICES Real anonymous testimonies from campus & home

“Who decided what a good woman should be?”

This magazine begins with expectations - not violence.

Editorial Board & Credits

EDITORIAL DIRECTION & STRATEGY

Kholipha Ahmmad Al-Amin

EDITOR IN CHIEF & PROJECT LEAD

Lead strategist, publication architecture, editorial voice, and structural oversight. Software Engineer & AI Specialist, Founder of EquiSaaS BD.

DESIGN & VISUAL IDENTITY

Mehedi Hasan

LEAD DESIGNER & ART DIRECTOR

Editorial grid design, typographic hierarchy, duotone photographic grading, newsprint print prototype, and column author.

THEORY ESTABLISHMENT

Shuvro

THEORY ESTABLISHMENT LEAD

Theoretical framework formulation, synthesis of Beauvoir, Connell, Foucault, Hall, and Kandiyoti within contemporary South Asian culture.

FIELDWORK & INTERVIEWERS

Field Research Collective

CAMPUS INTERVIEWERS & QUALITATIVE FIELDWORK

Primary campus interview protocol design, participant testimony collection, audio transcription, and qualitative coding of lived experiences.

RESEARCH ARTICLE & BIBLIOGRAPHY

Nayem

LEAD RESEARCH ARTICLE WRITER

Investigative case analysis, documentation of domestic policing mechanisms, cultural respectability standards, and media discourse in Bangladesh.

Tahsin

ACADEMIC BIBLIOGRAPHY & ARCHIVE LEAD

Theoretical cross-referencing, academic literature review, APA 7 citation standards, historical penal code archives, and fact-checking.

PUBLICATION COLOPHON

THE MARGIN MANIFESTO

A student-run critical journal on the misogyny that is visible, and the misogyny that ordinary life teaches us to overlook. Theory, history, cases, and voices, printed on purpose.

ISSN: 2958-8243 / Dhaka, Bangladesh / September 2026

Paper: 90gsm warm newsprint (#f4efe3) / Inks: Carbon black & Vermilion red

Typefaces: Instrument Serif, Source Serif 4, IBM Plex Mono, Noto Serif Bengali

ISSUE STRUCTURE AT A GLANCE

- pp. 04-06 Foundations: Definitions, concepts, and margins
- pp. 07 & 22 Mechanisms: The six-stage cycle and social ecosystem
- pp. 08-14 Theory: Beauvoir, Connell, Foucault, Hall, Kandiyoti
- pp. 15-20 Case Studies: Policing, grandmother effect, dress, image
- pp. 21-23 Evidence: Field interviews, data breakdown, opinions
- pp. 24-32 Reflections: Hard questions, poem, afterword, bibliography

— DEAR READER / A LETTER FROM THE DESK

The quiet kind

We usually recognize misogyny when it is loud - harassment, violence, abuse, openly hostile language. This issue is about the other register.

What about the advice that tells a girl how to dress? The expectation that a wife should sacrifice more? The assumption that a mother should put everyone before herself? The judgment of a woman who speaks too loudly, stays out too late, chooses not to marry, or prioritizes her career?

These practices may not always appear discriminatory. Sometimes they arrive dressed as tradition, protection, respectability, responsibility - or simply “the way things are.”

This magazine asks what happens when such expectations are repeated so often that they become difficult to recognize as social constructions at all.

More importantly, we examine a difficult question: can women themselves reproduce misogynistic norms? Our answer is yes - but this does not mean blaming women for patriarchy. It means examining how social norms are learned, internalized, negotiated and passed from one generation to another.

Through five theoretical perspectives, historical context, contemporary cases, interviews and critical reflection, The Other Margin looks at the misogyny that is visible - and the misogyny that ordinary life teaches us to overlook.

KHOLIPHA AHMMAD AL-AMIN / EDITOR IN CHIEF & LEAD STRATEGIST. DHAKA, 2026.

Founder & CEO, EquiSaaS BD / Software Engineer & AI Specialist

CORE DIAGNOSTIC QUESTION

“Can women themselves reproduce misogynistic norms?”

Hold this question through the theory pages. We return to it on pages 15, 16 and 24.

- Loud misogyny gets headlines. Quiet misogyny gets inherited.

MISOGYNY IS MORE THAN "HATING WOMEN"

A working definition

*The dictionary will tell you misogyny means hatred or contempt toward women. Our magazine uses a broader analytical understanding: misogyny can operate through hostility, devaluation, policing and punishment directed at women because they are women - especially when they challenge gendered expectations.

LOUD - WHAT WE ALREADY CALL MISOGYNY

harassment

threats

violence

sexist abuse

QUIET - WHAT WE RARELY NAME

shaming / judging / controlling stereotyping / victim blaming policing clothing / policing sexuality questioning women's choices

The quiet column is longer. That is the point.

— THREE CONCEPTS WE MUST SEPARATE

Not the same thing

These three words get used interchangeably. They shouldn't be. Each names a different level of the problem.

01 / SYSTEM

Patriarchy

The broader system of gendered power - the architecture in which all of this operates.

It predates any individual and outlives any individual's intentions.

02 / PREJUDICE

Sexism

Gender-based prejudice, stereotyping or unequal treatment - the assumptions that assign value by gender.

Sexism can be held casually, even affectionately, and still organize lives.

03 / HOSTILITY

Misogyny

Hostility, contempt, devaluation, policing or punishment directed toward women.

Its sharpest edge appears when women step outside assigned roles.

OUR KEY QUESTION

"How does a social system turn gender expectations into everyday behaviour?"

— WHAT WE PERCEIVE - AND WHAT WE OVERLOOK

Ordinary is not the same as harmless

We immediately recognize the loud register: physical violence, sexual harassment, explicit insults, threats, workplace discrimination, online abuse, sexual objectification.

But listen to what circulates without a name attached. Each of the sentences opposite may sound ordinary. Ordinary does not automatically mean harmless - it usually means rehearsed.

“Good girls don’t behave like that.”

“A woman should know how to adjust.”

“Why was she outside so late?”

“A married woman should prioritize her family.”

“Girls shouldn’t talk so loudly.”

“Women should dress respectfully.”

“She is too ambitious.”

ASK OF EVERY SENTENCE ABOVE

Who is expected to adjust? Who defines what is “respectable”? Would the same rule apply to a man? What happens when a woman refuses?

PLATE 01 - MORNING, DHAKA. THE STREET NOTICES EVERYTHING AND JUDGES QUIETLY.

- Nobody in this photograph is doing anything remarkable. That is precisely where the norms live.

— HOW DOES MISOGYNY REPRODUCE ITSELF?

The wheel nobody steers

The central insight:

A social norm becomes powerful when it no longer needs constant enforcement - because people begin enforcing it themselves.

Once a cycle reaches self-enforcement, no conspirator is required. Each turn looks like common sense.

- This is where Foucault becomes essential: disciplinary power works through surveillance, normalizing judgment and self-regulation - not only direct force. See page 11.

— THE THEORY BEHIND THE MAGAZINE

Five lenses, one problem

Instead of five biographies, five questions. Each thinker hands us a different magnification for the same everyday life.

LENS 01

Simone de Beauvoir

“Who gets to define ‘woman’?”

LENS 02

R. W. Connell

“How does gender organize power?”

LENS 03

Michel Foucault

“How do we learn to regulate ourselves?”

LENS 04

Stuart Hall

“How do representations make norms appear normal?”

LENS 05

Deniz Kandiyoti

“Why might women negotiate with a system that constrains them?”

Taken together, these five perspectives let us examine misogyny at different levels - the definition of woman, the structure of gender, the discipline of the self, the manufacture of the normal, and the bargains struck inside constraint.

SIMONE DE BEAUVOIR / 1949

Woman as the “Other”

Beauvoir’s analysis examines how woman is defined as relative to a male “Self” - rather than treated first and foremost as an autonomous subject.

In everyday life, this appears whenever a woman is introduced through her relations instead of herself: the good daughter, the good wife, the good mother.

Each phrase contains a hidden preposition - good to whom?

The question becomes: is she being recognized for who she is - or for how well she performs the identity society has assigned to her?

ASK YOURSELF

When you last introduced a woman, whose relation did you introduce her through?

- “One is not born, but rather becomes, a woman.” - the sentence this whole issue leans on.

BANGLADESH LENS

A GIRL

Be modest.

A WIFE

Adjust.

A MOTHER

Sacrifice.

A DAUGHTER

Obey.

The issue is not that caring, modesty or family responsibility are inherently bad. The issue is why these qualities become moral requirements specifically for women.

R. W. CONNELL / 1987 / 2005

The gender order

Connell treats gender as a social relationship and structure - not merely a personal identity. Her work on masculinities shows multiple masculinities positioned differently within relations of power; hegemonic masculinity names the culturally dominant configuration that legitimizes men's dominance.

MAN - THE EXPECTED LIST

provider / leader

strong / independent

decision-maker

WOMAN - THE EXPECTED LIST

caregiver / supporter emotional / domestic accommodating

These expectations create unequal social value. Watch the same behaviour get two names:

A confident man may be called assertive. A confident woman may be called aggressive.

A career-focused man may be called ambitious. A career-focused woman may be told she is neglecting her family.

ASK YOURSELF

Why can the same behaviour be praised in a man and criticized in a woman?

- Hegemonic masculinity also disciplines men who fall short of it - the order polices both sides of the ledger.

MICHEL FOUCAULT / 1975

When power enters the mirror

PLATE 02 - THE AUDIENCE MOVED INDOORS. SHE CHECKS HERSELF BEFORE ANYONE ELSE MUST.

Foucault helps us understand a particularly quiet form of power: self-discipline. His account of disciplinary power emphasizes observation, normalization and judgment as mechanisms through which people become regulated - the panopticon moved into everyday posture, clothing, and speech.

A VIGNETTE

Imagine a woman choosing clothes. Nobody tells her: "Change."

But she thinks: "What will people say?"

She changes. Nobody forced her.

Yet social judgment has already acted.

THE MOVEMENT

SOCIETY WATCHES / I ANTICIPATE JUDGMENT / I
WATCH MYSELF / I REGULATE MYSELF

THE QUESTION

"If people learn to police themselves, does society still need to police them directly?"

STUART HALL / 1997

H

The woman we keep seeing

Representation is not simply about showing reality. It helps construct the conceptual systems through which reality is understood. Hall examines how images, language and cultural codes operate as signifying practices - repetition doing the ideological work of proof.

CASE STUDY 01 / TELEVISION DRAMA

The "Lokkhi Bou" Archetype

In classic Bangladeshi television serials and telefilms, virtuous womanhood is systematically encoded as self-effacing domestic service, emotional restraint, and silent endurance. Outspoken or ambitious women are framed as disruptive to family harmony. Through decades of primetime repetition, this trope naturalizes female compliance as moral virtue.

CASE STUDY 02 / COMMERCIAL MEDIA

The Fairness Imperative

Billboard and broadcast advertising across Dhaka markets skin lightening as a prerequisite for self-worth, respectability, and career advancement. Drawing on Hall's "Spectacle of the Other", dark skin is encoded as a personal lack to be remedied, while fairness is encoded as social mobility. Commercial media does not merely sell cream; it manufactures racialized gender norms.

ENCODING & DECODING / STUART HALL

Media texts encode dominant cultural ideologies. When audiences consume these images without critical resistance, they adopt the "preferred reading" - accepting that quiet, self-sacrificing behavior is what a woman naturally is, rather than what culture repeatedly demands she become.

CORE TAKEAWAY

A representation does not need to lie. It only needs to repeat until cultural construction is mistaken for nature.

DENIZ KANDIYOTI / 1988

The patriarchal bargain

Kandiyoti argues that women develop strategies within concrete patriarchal constraints. She calls these strategies “patriarchal bargains.” Different systems create different “rules of the game,” and women negotiate those rules to maximize security or life options.

— WHAT CONFORMITY CAN BUY

FAMILY
ACCEPTANCE

SECURITY

SOCIAL
STATUSECONOMIC
PROTECTIONREDUCED
CONFLICT

Does conformity always mean agreement?

Not necessarily. A woman may follow a traditional expectation because it steadies her life - while privately finding the rules unjust.

Therefore: accommodation can be a strategy for survival, not proof that oppression is freely accepted. This is why we should be careful before judging women who conform to patriarchal expectations. The bargain is made under conditions the bargainer did not set.

ASK YOURSELF

Whose consent is easiest to collect? The one who agrees - or the one for whom refusal is most expensive?

- This lens will do heavy work on page 24, when we ask whether women are part of the problem.

— THE SAME SITUATION - FIVE DIFFERENT LENSES

One woman, five theories

Scenario: a woman chooses to continue her career after marriage.

Watch what each lens notices.

BEAUVOIR

Why is a “good wife” expected to prioritize family over self-development - and who defined “good”?

CONNELL

Why is domestic care disproportionately associated with femininity, while paid work is coded masculine?

FOUCAULT

Does she begin limiting herself - dressing, speaking, staying later than she should - because she anticipates judgment?

HALL

How have media representations already constructed “the ideal wife” she is measured against?

KANDIYOTI

Could accommodation or negotiation with expectations be a strategy for security within a patriarchal system?

CONCLUSION

One social practice can contain construction, power, discipline, representation and negotiation - simultaneously.

CASE STUDY
012025 / Bangladesh / online audiences

When women police women

The 2025 controversy involving Bangladeshi model Tangia Zaman Methila shows misogynistic objectification circulating inside online audiences - including from women.

DO NOT MAKE THIS ARGUMENT

"Women are the real problem."

A lazy conclusion that flatters the structure by blaming its casualties.

ASK INSTEAD

What happens when women reproduce the same gendered standards that constrain women?

A woman can participate in: sexual objectification / body shaming / slut-shaming / appearance policing / moral judgment. Misogynistic norms can circulate between women as well as between men and women.

PLATE 03 - THE JURY THAT NEVER LEAVES THE ROOM. EACH SCREEN A SMALL COURTROOM.

KEEP THE DISTINCTION

*Reproduction is not the same as origin.
A woman reproducing a misogynistic norm does not mean she created the broader gender structure.*

CASE STUDY 02 Grandmother / mother / daughter

The grandmother effect

GENERATION 01

Grandmother

"Girls should behave properly."

GENERATION 02

Mother

"This is how a respectable woman behaves."

GENERATION 03

Daughter

"This is simply normal."

PLATE 04 - WHAT IS PASSED DOWN IS NOT ONLY JEWELLERY.

ASK YOURSELF

Which sentence from the previous generation do you still repeat - and would you defend it, or only perform it?

Can someone who has experienced gender inequality also reproduce gender inequality?

Yes. Because people can simultaneously be constrained by a norm and be agents who reproduce that norm. This is not necessarily hypocrisy - it can be the ordinary arithmetic of socialization + internalization + normalization.

- The daughter who says "this is simply normal" is not lying. She is reporting her data.

— SPECIAL COLUMN

Protection, or control?

PLATE 05 - THE GRILL KEEPS THINGS OUT. IT ALSO KEEPS THINGS IN.

A parent says: “I’m restricting you for your own safety.”

We should not immediately dismiss the concern. Women genuinely face safety risks, and love often stands behind the lock on the door.

But watch what happens to the question being asked. Instead of “How can we make public spaces safer?” it becomes “Why was she outside?” Instead of “How do we prevent harassment?” it becomes “Why was she dressed like that?”

The risk is real - but the remedy moves, quietly, from the conditions that produce insecurity to the woman who must live with it.

OUR CRITICAL QUESTION

When does protection become control?

Not every protective action is misogynistic. Protection becomes problematic when women’s freedom is disproportionately restricted while the underlying conditions producing insecurity remain unchallenged.

— HIJAB / CLOTHING / AGENCY - DO NOT FRAME THIS AS LIBERAL VS CONSERVATIVE

Who gets to choose what a woman wears?

The real question is not the garment. The real question is agency - who decides, and at what cost of refusal.

IF A WOMAN CHOOSES
HIJAB

:

Agency. A religious, cultural or personal decision that belongs to her.

IF A FAMILY FORCES HER TO WEAR IT

:

Coercion. The choice has been removed, whatever the garment means to others.

IF SOCIETY SHAMES HER
FOR NOT WEARING IT

:

Social policing. The norm enforces itself through her neighbours' mouths.

IF SOCIETY MOCKS HER
FOR WEARING IT

:

Social policing again. The "liberal" direction of pressure is still pressure.

The issue is not simply what a woman wears. The issue is whether she has meaningful agency over her choice.

This framing avoids reducing women's experiences to a simplistic binary - traditional = oppressed, modern = free. Both directions of pressure can confiscate the same thing.

— WOMEN & POLITICAL LEADERSHIP - NOT A COMPARISON OF TWO POLITICIANS

Can women lead without being judged as women?

Are women leaders evaluated through the same standards as men? Consider the judgments that attach specifically to their being women:

VOICE

APPEARANCE

AGE

EMOTIONALITY

FAMILY

CLOTHING

ASSERTIVENESS

LEADERSHIP STYLE

A male leader displaying firmness may be called strong.

A female leader displaying the same firmness may be called aggressive.

This connects directly with Connell (the gender order), Beauvoir (the “Other”) and Hall (the repeated image). Political criticism is legitimate; gendered judgment is a different act wearing criticism’s clothes.

OUR QUESTION

“When does political criticism become gendered judgment?”

BODY, SEXUALITY & ARTISTIC EXPRESSION

Who owns a woman's image?

A woman may use her body or sexuality in artistic expression. But audiences may interpret her body however they choose. So the honest questions are paired, not single:

PAIR 01

Agency – or objectification?

PAIR 02

Expression – or sexualization?

PAIR 03

Choice – or pressure?

THE ANSWER CANNOT BE READ OFF THE IMAGE ALONE. WE MUST ASK

01 who created it,

02 why it was created,

03 whether the woman had agency,

04 how audiences interpret it,

05 whether economic or social pressures shaped the choice.

A woman's visibility does not automatically mean she has lost agency – and sexualization by an audience does not automatically mean the woman's expression itself was misogynistic.

CAMPUS FIELDWORK PROTOCOL / N=80 SURVEYED PARTICIPANTS

Our voices: Data & lived experience

PRIMARY LOCUS OF EVERYDAY BEHAVIORAL POLICING (N=80)

- 45% Domestic expectations & family respectability
- 28% Peer surveillance, group chats & social media
- 17% Campus institutional norms & faculty remarks
- 10% Public transit gaze & street commentary

Empirical finding: Over 73% of behavioral surveillance operates through domestic and peer relations, proving that quiet policing is primarily reproduced within intimate circles.

SAMIRA / 21, LITERATURE SENIOR

"I stopped using animated hand gestures during department seminars. A senior male student quietly remarked that I sounded 'unnecessarily intense.' I noticed myself lowering my voice and smiling more just to keep people comfortable."

NUSRAT / 24, GRADUATE RESEARCHER

"Older women police younger women because they survived under harsh patriarchal bargains. When a young woman ignores those restrictions without punishment, it retroactively threatens everything the older generation gave up to survive."

RAFID / 23, ECONOMICS SENIOR

"Curfew is the clearest double standard. My brother returns at 11 PM and my parents call it ambition. My sister delayed by 30 minutes in Dhaka traffic causes an immediate family conference on modesty and safety."

TANVIR / 22, CAMPUS ACTIVIST

"Men frequently say 'I restrict you because I care about your protection.' But when protection requires eliminating someone's independence and mobility, it is no longer protection - it is private jurisdiction."

— WHY DOES MISOGYNY REPRODUCE ITSELF?

The social ecosystem

- 01 FAMILY SOCIALIZATION
- 02 PEER PRESSURE
- 03 CULTURAL NORMS
- 04 MEDIA REPRESENTATION
- 05 FEAR OF JUDGMENT
- 06 ECONOMIC DEPENDENCE
- 07 DESIRE FOR SOCIAL ACCEPTANCE
- 08 INTERNALIZED NORMS

EVERYTHING FEEDS
Normalization

These are not eight isolated causes. They are one weather system. Each factor feeds the next, and the whole arrangement turns from eight separate pressures into one climate that feels like common sense.

“Misogyny rarely survives through one institution alone. It becomes durable when multiple social environments repeat similar expectations.”

- Compare the wheel on page 07: the ecosystem is the cycle drawn from the inside - what it feels like to live in it.

5 PEOPLE / 5 QUESTIONS / 5 PERSPECTIVES

Five opinions, five provocations

VOICE 01

“What is one thing women are expected to tolerate that men are not?”

SLOT / RESPONSE RESERVED

[Real response.]

VOICE 02

“Can a woman enforce a norm that disadvantages women?”

SLOT / RESPONSE RESERVED

[Real response.]

VOICE 03

“When does protection become control?”

SLOT / RESPONSE RESERVED

[Real response.]

VOICE 04

“Is tradition a justification for gender inequality?”

SLOT / RESPONSE RESERVED

[Real response.]

VOICE 05

“Can choosing a traditional role still be an act of agency?”

SLOT / RESPONSE RESERVED

[Real response.]

- Again - real responses only. Where an answer surprises us, we print it intact.

— ARE WOMEN PART OF THE PROBLEM?

The uncomfortable question

Yes - but not in the way you might think.

— ONE POSSIBLE ROUTE OF REPRODUCTION

This creates a paradox:

Victim + participant, at the same time.

And that is precisely what makes misogyny difficult to dismantle: the system recruits its own constrained subjects as its wardens, and punishes them if they refuse the post.

Reproducing a system is not the same as creating the system.

A STRONG ACADEMIC PROJECT MUST CHALLENGE ITSELF

But are we calling everything misogyny?

PROBLEM 01

Over-expansion

If every gender difference becomes misogyny, the concept loses meaning.

PROBLEM 02

Victim blaming

Saying women reproduce misogyny can accidentally shift responsibility onto women.

PROBLEM 03

Agency

Not every woman who chooses a traditional role is necessarily oppressed.

PROBLEM 04

Cultural complexity

Not every tradition is automatically misogynistic.

OUR RESPONSE

We do not argue that every gender norm is misogyny. We ask when gendered expectations become mechanisms of devaluation, policing, exclusion or punishment.

We analyze women’s participation in reproducing norms without treating women as responsible for creating the structural conditions in which those norms operate.

— WHAT CAN CHANGE?

Breaking the cycle

01 GENDER-TRANSFORMATIVE PARENTING

Don't teach "girls do this, boys do that." Give children equal responsibilities and opportunities.

02 CRITICAL MEDIA LITERACY

Teach people to ask: who is being represented? Who is missing? What kind of woman is presented as "normal"?

03 PARTICIPATORY EDUCATION

Don't simply tell people gender equality is important. Create conversations where people can question the norms they inherited.

04 SUPPORT WOMEN WHO CHALLENGE NORMS

If challenging a norm produces social punishment, women need social support to make resistance sustainable.

05 CHANGE THE QUESTION

Instead of "Why doesn't she behave properly?" - ask "Who defined what 'proper' means?"

Every intervention above attacks one turn of the wheel from page 07. Pick your turn.

A POEM

The Selfish of Mine

MEHEDI HASAN

Lead designer /
columnist, poems

- The mirror reappears. This time it speaks back.

My selfishness is nothing like others,
Mine is kinder than theirs.
Their hearts are colder than December air,
Softness grows for hidden profit.
If no, evil comes out.

Had I but world enough and time,
I would read the face of society.
Reality wears the double faces,
The truth behind their similes would show.

Little selves made those visible.
I stand in reflection
A mirror showing them,
Not big me.
It walking like an unseen shadow
While honesty sleeps under the heavy dusty.

It's the fire in my eyes.
I have measured out mine.
Mine is not truly mine alone.
Me only cruel, others kind in name
Innocent me, brutal to theirs.

Write for Issue 02.

The next issue of The Other Margin is under assembly.

We are reading drafts on the invisible curriculum - everything school, family and the street teach us before we agree to learn it.

01 Essays / reportage / interviews / criticism / photographs / poetry

02 Anonymous submissions welcome - we publish your words, not your name, if you prefer.

03 Send drafts to the editorial desk, Room / Department of -, or hand them to any masthead member on page 02.

— ADVERTISEMENT

Nodi & Ink

BOOKS / TEA / LONG AFTERNONS / CAMPUS CORNER, DHAKA

A shelf for the questions this issue raises: The Second Sex, Discipline and Punish, Representation, Masculinities - and a bench outside for arguing about them over milk tea.

Student card - tea at half price.

Reading circle - every Friday, no syllabus.

Bring a woman's name we haven't read yet.

OPEN / SAT-THU / 10-10

"A MARGIN IS A GOOD PLACE TO START A LIBRARY."

TWO LISTS, SIDE BY SIDE, ONE LAST TIME

What we perceive / what we overlook

WHAT WE PERCEIVE

Violence.

Harassment.

Threats.

Insults.

Discrimination.

WHAT WE OVERLOOK

The advice.

The expectation.

The joke.

The judgment.

The comparison.

The “protection.”

The “tradition.”

The “good woman.”

The “proper woman.”

The silence.

The right column is longer than the left. Print that inequality somewhere in your memory.

— CONCLUDING SECTION / EDITORIAL COLLECTIVE

The Afterword: Our Collective Prospective

Personal reflections from the editorial and research collective on interrogating everyday misogyny, developing theoretical frameworks, and printing uncomfortable realities.

Kholipha Ahmmad Al-Amin

EDITOR IN CHIEF & PROJECT LEAD

"Building this magazine forced us to confront the reality that misogyny endures because it is intimate, not distant. In Bangladesh, surveillance is routinely masked as affection, protection, and family honor. By naming these quiet mechanisms rather than evading them, our collective sought to create a permanent margin where readers begin questioning what society conditions them to accept as natural."

Mehedi Hasan

LEAD DESIGNER & VISUAL DIRECTOR

"Visual grammar communicates ideology long before a reader digests a paragraph. Choosing stark chiaroscuro, heavy analog grain, and newsprint duotone constraints was an explicit rejection of glossy commercial aesthetics. The layout mirrors the structural weight of the unspoken boundaries documented across every sheet."

Shuvro

THEORY ESTABLISHMENT LEAD

"Grounding European theoretical frameworks within the living reality of Dhaka demonstrated that critical theory is not a detached exercise. Beauvoir, Connell, Foucault, and Hall provide precise diagnostic instruments to explain why patriarchal bargains are made and how social discipline operates through daily routine."

Nayem

LEAD RESEARCH ARTICLE WRITER

"Investigating everyday policing revealed how deeply internalized social anxiety is among campus youth. Nearly every person we spoke with described altering their speech, posture, or clothing to preempt community disapproval. Documenting that quiet vigilance was the most demanding responsibility of our work."

Tahsin

ACADEMIC BIBLIOGRAPHY & ARCHIVE LEAD

"A critical publication cannot rely on emotional assertion alone; it requires empirical grounding, archival documentation, and methodological rigor. Ensuring every theoretical concept was verified and referenced was our way of demonstrating that everyday misogyny is a measurable social reality, not an isolated grievance."

THE OTHER MARGIN EDITORIAL COLLECTIVE

DHAKA, BANGLADESH / SEPTEMBER 2026

END OF EDITORIAL FEATURES

31 / 32

Bibliography

Beauvoir, S. de. (2010). The second sex (C. Borde & S. Malovany-Chevallier, Trans.). Vintage. (Original work published 1949)

Connell, R. W. (2005). Masculinities (2nd ed.). University of California Press.

Foucault, M. (1995). Discipline and punish: The birth of the prison (A. Sheridan, Trans.). Vintage. (Original work published 1975)

Hall, S. (Ed.). (1997). Representation: Cultural representations and signifying practices. SAGE.

Kandiyoti, D. (1988). Bargaining with patriarchy. Gender & Society, 2(3), 274-290.
<https://doi.org/10.1177/089124388002003004>

Case references - the 2025 controversy involving Bangladeshi model
Tangia Zaman Methila (online audience discourse) - and the full interview transcripts accompany the print edition of this issue.
Additional historical context compiled by Shuvro; article research archive by Nayem; theoretical analysis notes by Tahsin.

- A bibliography is also a representation system: it tells you whose thinking the magazine leaned on, and which names the shelf was missing.